Future Of Political Islam:

The Future of Political Islam G. Fuller, 2003-05-12 September 11 vitriolic rhetoric against the United States by prominent Muslims the war against terrorism shifts from Afghanistan to the Philippines and Indonesia It is easy to believe Islam and Muslims are enemies of the West it is also wrong This sweeping survey of trends in the Muslim world contends that the issue is not whether Islam plays a central role in politics but what Muslims want To focus on radicalism and extremism blinds us from another trend liberal political Islam Proponents of liberal political Islam emphasize human rights and democracy tolerance and cooperation They face an uphill struggle as authoritarian regimes oppress opposition and use Islam to justify their undemocratic rule As people are denied avenues to participate and criticize as secular ideologies have failed religion has come to play a central role in politics The outcome of the struggle between extremists and liberals will determine the future of political Islam

What Future for Political Islam G. Fuller, M. Kurpershoek, 2004 The Future of Political Islam Graham E. Fuller, 2003 Mr Fuller has attempted to fill the gap in our understanding of the diversity of political Islam and its place in world politics It is a central thesis of his work that political Islam is not an exotic and distant phenomenon but can be understood in the context of the universal struggle by both liberals and authoritarians as they try to make sense of a troubling and rapidly modernizing world Mr Fuller sees political Islam as the one organizing principle that pervades the daily life in the Muslim world more profoundly than any other single ideological or conceptual force in that society Therefore one could argue that political Islam is also part of a drive to restore the identity and dignity of a world where a once glorious past has somehow led many to see only a bleak and future less present

The Future of Political Islam in the Arab World Tariq Ramadan, 2012-10-02 The strength of the initial revolutionary movements in Tunisia Egypt Libya or Syria lay in not having a specific leadership Rather these movements comprised men and women from different classes backgrounds and religions all coming together In Egypt this was very apparent many came together from a variety of secular leftist and Islamist groups there was no leadership It was clear from the very beginning that these were not Islamist revolutions as some labeled them The Islamists in many of these countries joined the efforts afterwards in fact in the beginning the Islamists were very hesitant to become involved The first to push the Islamist movement to participate were the young members of Tunisia's Al Nahda For the Muslim Brotherhood in Egypt the group's leadership initially said that they would not be involved but they were then encouraged to do so by the younger generation Within the Brotherhood it was quite clear that there was and remains a fracture concerning strategy Whilst the lack of a central leadership brought the initial movements strength it was to become their weakness Why We know now that following the removal of the dictators it quickly became apparent that there was a lack of vision and clarity about what the people actually wanted All we know is what they didn't want so we are still unsure as to what the future will hold Across the board the movements early strength became their weakness From the secularists to the Islamists these pertinent questions persist what is the future and what do they want These questions must be applied from the outset in order to understand the strengths and weaknesses of these movements Ultimately the situation is complex with many issues to consider this is where we are a complex region facing complex challenges with complex dimensions Consequently it pays to be cautious when attempting to predict future developments in Muslim majority countries The current period is quite critical a turning point Something has changed and we can't go back It is now up to the young generation even the Islamists My position on this is quite clear it can't be done by killing or torturing people if someone is dealing with politics be they secular or Islamist it doesn't matter as long as he or she is non violent and respects the rule of law and the democratic process he or she is entitled to be involved in the process and be part of the political discussion Why because is it good for all of us it is good for you because there is nothing in Islam and this is my position that says that religion should take over the state It should be about democratic and majority processes this is Islamic Political Islam: Background, New Islamism and Future Prospects Can Esen,2014-03-12 Scientific Essay from the year 2011 in the subject Politics Miscellaneous Saint Mary's University Saint Mary's University course Politics of the Middle East language English abstract Following the collapse of the Ottoman Empire countries in the Muslim world had roughly two options on which policy to adopt in order to defend themselves against the Western imperial powers The first option was to revive the Caliphate which Ottoman Empire abolished as institution and embrace a new way of Islamic Political Universalism This seemed rather a hard task during early 20th century and it still seems does in contemporary context Second one was to create nationalist secular states in which language territory and shared history was the determinant of defining identities
