Deafness B., Vona, 2016-04-21 Genetics of Deafness offers a journey through areas crucial for understanding the causes and effects of hearing loss. It covers such topics as the latest approaches in diagnostics and deafness research and the current status and future promise of gene therapy for hearing restoration. The book begins by bringing attention to how hearing loss affects the individual and society. Methods of hearing loss detection and management throughout the lifespan are highlighted as is a particularly new development in newborn hearing screening. The challenges of hearing loss, an extremely heterogeneous impairment, are addressed. Additional topics include current research interests ranging from novel gene identification to their functional validation in the mouse and zebrafish. The book ends with a chapter on the state of the art of gene therapy, an area that is certain to gain increasing attention as molecular mechanisms of deafness are better understood. Genetics of Deafness, written by leading authors in the field, is a must read for clinicians, researchers, and students. It provides much needed insight into the diagnosis and research of hereditary hearing loss. Genes, Hearing, and Deafness Alessandro Martini, Dafydd Stephens, Andrew P. Read, 2007-06-13 The field of generic hearing impairment is one where rapid advances are taking place and it can often be difficult for audiologists to keep track of the broader picture. In this important new text, the authors take a synoptic approach and summarize the causes and basis of hearing impairments, the impact on the individual, and the therapies available. Genetics and Hearing Impairment Dai Stephens, 1996 The aim of this book is to provide a description of what is currently known about the genetics of deafness for audiologists, otologists, and general geneticists. It includes a number of background chapters introducing relevant genetics for audiologists and otologists and relevant aspects of auditory intervention for geneticists. These cover the epidemiology of hearing loss and the current situation with regard to gene identification within the field. Chapters on the common syndromes, e.g. Ushers, Waardenburg, Pendred, Branchio otorenal, and Treacher Collins, are followed by coverage of Dominant Recessive and x-linked non-syndromal deafness together with mitochondrial deafness. The final section includes chapters on the genetic, rehabilitative, and surgical management of genetic disorders. Biomedical Index to PHS-supported Research, 1987 Biomedical Index to PHS-supported Research: pt. A. Subject access A-H, 1994 Genetics and Learning Disabilities Shelley D. Smith, 1986 Genetics of Focal Epilepsies Samuel F. Berkovic, 1999 This volume contains contributions on genetic aspects of a wide range of focal epilepsies. It is based on an international workshop held in Avignon, France, in September 1996. Topics covered include idiopathic age-related focal epilepsies, idiopathic focal epilepsies in infancy, autosomal dominant focal epilepsies, molecular biology, animal models, and case reports. Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 2002 United States. Neuropsychological Correlates of a Genetic Metabolic Disorder Angela Occhiuto Ballantyne,1996 Infantile nephropathic cystinosis is a rare genetic metabolic disorder in which the amino acid cystine accumulates in various organs including the kidney cornea thyroid and brain The existing neurocognitive literature suggests the presence of visual processing deficits against a background of generally normal intellectual capacity The purpose of the present study was to further characterize the nature of these deficits It was hypothesized that children with cystinosis would demonstrate a dissociation between visuospatial and visuoperceptual abilities with impaired spatial functioning and intact perceptual functioning Hypotheses were based on cognitive studies to date as well as a review of the visual processing literature Study participants were 141 children 33 with cystinosis 108 controls ages 5 through 14 years Tests of visuospatial and visuoperceptual functioning were administered Data were analyzed using hierarchical regression analyses and MANCOVA After covarying for relevant demographic variables the cystinosis group consistently demonstrated impairments in spatial processing whereas perceptual processing was largely intact Results supported the hypothesis of a dissociation in visual processing Findings suggest that cystinosis has a differential effect on the two cortical visual processing streams with the where i e posterior parietal system affected to a greater extent than the what i e inferior temporal system The present study
