

Thematics of "Business and Society"

Business and Sustainability

Businesses are part of society and contribute to the well-being of society. They are not just profit-making entities but also social actors. This means they have a responsibility towards society beyond their economic activities. This responsibility is often referred to as Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) or Corporate Social Performance (CSP). It includes aspects like environmental protection, employee welfare, and community engagement. The business and society relationship is a complex one, involving various stakeholders and interests. It is a dynamic relationship that evolves over time and across different cultures and contexts. Understanding this relationship is crucial for businesses to thrive in the long run and for society to benefit from their activities.
