Effective Programs For Students At Risk:

Effective Programs for Students at Risk Robert E. Slavin, Nancy L. Karweit, Nancy A. Madden, 1989 A practical synthesis of latest research on how to enhance achievement of at risk elementary students Includes chapter on compensatory education Research Identifies Effective Programs for Students at Risk of School Failure, 1987 Dismantling Contemporary Deficit Thinking Richard R. Valencia, 2010-09-13 Deficit thinking is a pseudoscience founded on racial and class bias It blames the victim for school failure instead of examining how schools are structured to prevent poor students and students of color from learning Dismantling Contemporary Deficit Thinking provides comprehensive critiques and anti deficit thinking alternatives to this oppressive theory by framing the linkages between prevailing theoretical perspectives and contemporary practices within the complex historical development of deficit thinking Dismantling Contemporary Deficit Thinking examines the ongoing social construction of deficit thinking in three aspects of current discourse the genetic pathology model the culture of poverty model and the at risk model in which poor students students of color and their families are pathologized and marginalized Richard R Valencia challenges these three contemporary components of the deficit thinking theory by providing incisive critiques and discussing competing explanations for the pervasive school failure of many students in the nation s public schools Valencia also discusses a number of proactive anti deficit thinking suggestions from the fields of teacher education educational leadership and educational ethnography that are intended to provide a more equitable and democratic schooling for all students

Funding Public Schools Kenneth K. Wong, 1999 This book examines the fundamental role of politics in funding our public schools and fills a conceptual imbalance in the current literature in school finance and educational policy Unlike those who are primarily concerned about cost efficiency Kenneth Wong specifies how resources are allocated for what purposes at different levels of the government In contrast to those who focus on litigation as a way to reduce funding gaps he underscores institutional stalemate and the lack of political will to act as important factors that affect legislative deadlock in school finance reform Wong defines how politics has sustained various types of rules that affect the allocation of resources at the federal state and local level While these rules have been remarkably stable over the past twenty to thirty years they have often worked at cross purposes by fragmenting policy and constraining the education process at schools with the greatest needs Wong s examination is shaped by several questions How do these rules come about What role does politics play in retention of the rules Do the federal state and local governments espouse different policies In what ways do these policies operate at cross purposes How do they affect educational opportunities Do the policies cohere in ways that promote better and more equitable student outcomes Wong concludes that the five types of entrenched rules for resource allocation are rooted in existing governance arrangements and seemingly impervious to partisan shifts interest group pressures and constitutional challenge And because these rules foster policy fragmentation and embody initiatives out of step with the performance based reform agenda of the 1990s the outlook for positive change in public education is uncertain unless fairly radical approaches are employed Wong also analyzes four allocative reform models two based on the assumption that existing political structures are unlikely to change and two that seek to empower actors at the school level The two models for systemwide restructuring aimed at intergovernmental coordination and or integrated governance would seek to clarify responsibilities for public education among federal state and local authorities above all integrating political and educational accountability The other two models identified by Wong shift control from state and district to the school one based on local leadership and the other based on market forces In discussing the guiding principles of the four models Wong takes care to identify both the potential and limitations of each Written with a broad policy audience in mind Wong s book should appeal to professionals interested in the politics of educational reform and to teachers of courses dealing with educational policy and administration and intergovernmental relations

Effective Programs for At-risk Adolescents John W. Dougherty,1990 Students considered at risk are defined as students who lack a sense of identity personal connectedness and personal power Another characteristic of at risk students is the role parents play or fail to play in the at risk behavior A case is made for all students being at risk at some point in their lives Four programs were designed and implemented to help at risk and marginal students at one junior high school The four programs include the OK Club the Quest for Success Skills Program the I CANN Individualized Course Alternative Now or Never and the Student Assistance Council The OK Club is designed to build self esteem and to provide after school support and requires a strong parental component The Quest for Success Skills Program is a transition program which prepares at risk sixth graders for junior high school The I CANN Program provides counseling development of self esteem and a hands on curriculum It also has a strong parental component The Student Assistance Council involves a staff team that assesses the needs of at risk students and recommends actions to address those needs A successful program must begin with an attitude of caring This caring attitude must be reflected by the total school staff toward every student and his or her family ABL International Encyclopedia of Developmental and Instructional Psychology Erik de Corte, Franz E. Weinert, 1996 This Encyclopedia intends to provide a research based overview in an educational perspective of the present state of the art of our knowledge and understanding of the conditions processes and modifiabilities of human development and learning The Encyclopedia focuses on both developmental psychology and instructional psychology Over the past decade the boundaries between these two separate research domains have become increasingly obscure Indeed developmental psychologists have shown a growing interest in the impact of environmental factors on development this has led to the study of educational and instructional variables the pre dominantly environmental factors Meanwhile instructional psychology has become a major subdomain of research on human cognition and development A substantial contribution to the synergy between both domains derives from the robust research finding that developmental changes are very important conditions as well as consequences of the acquisition of knowledge and meta cognitive strategies The resulting changes have inspired the decision to combine both developmental and instructional psychology into one single volume The trend toward the integration of both domains notwithstanding the systematic discussion of their research findings requires a certain delimitation of the two fields The Encyclopedia is divided into 16 areas in order to reflect the specific nature as well as the integration of both domains In the first section which is most representative of the integrative tendency a general framework of research on human development learning and instruction is outlined The next six chapters are concerned with the various aspects of human development and learning The remaining nine sections represent an overview of the research findings on learning and instruction which are relevant to education Articles include updated and revised material from the International Encyclopedia of Education 2nd Edition described by Choice as being a premier resource when judged on virtually every criteria applied to a reference work The Encyclopedia provides an informative introduction to aspects of developmental psychology and instructional psychology that significantly influence education Educational Research Quarterly ,1994 Resources in Education ,1990 It's Elementary! Bill Honig, 1992 This report is intended to assist teachers administrators parents and community leaders in achieving excellence in California s public elementary education The report is also designed to help teachers and administrators engage elementary school students in a thinking curriculum that immerses students in a rich learning environment that recognizes and celebrates the unique background and experiences each student brings to the classroom Following an introduction that outlines its purpose the report is divided into seven chapters each of which contains recommendations supported by a discussion excerpts from key writings and a listing of sources of additional information The first chapter includes a detailed discussion of current learning theory and its implications for elementary instruction on a subject by subject basis One recommendation is included The second chapter which deals with practical strategies for implementing a rigorous curriculum contains recommendations 2 through 15 Chapter 3 concerns ways to connect classroom teachers to the larger professional issues in elementary education and consists chiefly of recommendations 16 through 20 Ways in which California s new elementary grades assessment program can be used to spur curriculum reform are described in recommendations 21 24 contained in the fourth chapter The fifth chapter outlines ways to help families and children build emotional bonds to the school as detailed in recommendations 25 29 Students physical and emotional needs are addressed in the sixth chapter which presents one recommendation and the final chapter ending with recommendations 31 and 32 describes steps that school districts can take to support elementary schools in their quest for self improvement MM
