From Access To Application An Internet Professional Development Handbook:

From Access to Application Margo J. Berg, Michael Damyanovich, 2000-11-01 Tells the story of the A2A project bringing the Internet into the science and math classroom and to articulate A2A's strategies of success so that others may adopt and adapt them. As more and more schools acquire computer and network communication technology, they must address the professional development needs of teachers who are expected to apply these technologies for teaching. Demonstrates the possibility of imbedding Internet skills training (IST) within a larger PD context. Learning and mastering Internet skills is integrated with learning and trying new standards based practices in the classroom. Can be adapted to integrate IST with PD in other areas.
