

What to Expect Day by Day After Tooth Extraction

Day 1

The first twenty-four hours after tooth extraction, you might experience some minor bleeding, slight discomfort, and facial swelling. These are common during the healing process.

Day 2

At this point, the blood clot should be fully formed in the empty socket, and healing should be well underway. Any swelling should start to subside.

Day 3

If you look at the extraction site, you will probably see it is beginning to close up as healing continues.

Day 4

By day four, the extraction site should have almost completely closed up, and any discomfort and swelling should be minimal. At this point, you should be able to eat a greater range of harder and more solid foods.
