Fear Of Crime:

Fear of Crime Murray Lee, Stephen Farrall, 2008-07-03 Why is fear of crime so rife in society today The government and media have ploughed money and resources into surveys and initiatives to find out As a concept fear of crime has produced considerable academic debate and this book brings together a collection of new and cutting edge articles from key scholars in criminology which question the orthodoxy of fear of crime models

Fear of Crime Kenneth F. Ferraro, 1995-03-09 Ferraro examines how people interpret their risk of criminal victimization and identifies who is most likely to be afraid of crime Although many previous studies of fear of crime do not explicitly consider the concept of risk or perceived risk in estimating the prevalence of fear the approach taken here considers perceived risk as central to the entire interpretive process It links national survey data on how people think about crime to official crime rates in America and uses the comprehensive set of environmental and personal variables on a nationally representative sample to examine how fear develops for ten different types of crime

Social Order and the Fear of Crime in Contemporary Times Stephen D. Farrall, Jonathan Jackson, Emily Gray, 2009-10 The fear of crime has been recognized as an important social problem affecting a significant number of people In this book the authors review the findings from over 35 years of research into attitudes to crime and propose a new model separating those who only expressively fear crime from those who have actual experience of worrying about it

Fear of Crime and Punitiveness Helmut Kury, 2013 As a subject area of inquiry and research fear of crime and punitiveness have played an increasingly important role in criminology Since the early 1990s and emanating largely from within the United States there has been a growing body of research as well as increased attention given to the subject by the media and policy makers In part triggered by the fact that the United States has the highest imprisonment rate approx 780 100 000 in 2012 in the Western world and still has the death penalty in most states increasing attention has been paid to the impact of peoples perceptions of crime their fear of possible victimization and their sense of punitivity to wards offenders And although the body of literature on fear of crime and punitivity has been growing there still remain many regions and countries of the world where there is a dearth of such research This collection includes several of the countries where such research represents the first of its kind The reader will be provided a broad overview of the subject and presented with varied observations about fear of crime and punitivity from different parts of the world As the project represents a novel and exploratory venture into the subject area the collective content provided in this collection will hopefully also serve to advance future research and inform sentencing policy and initiatives to address fear of crime This volume includes seven comparable reports in which the contributors used a common standardized survey to collect data on fear of crime and punitivity among post secondary students The countries represent a cross section of different legal political and cultural systems The countries also vary in their degree of criminal justice development and in terms of the rights of victims In each of the contributions the authors provide an overview of their country before discussing the results of the survey they administered The articles are prepared in a manner that allow varying degrees of comparison as well as recommendations for the future direction of this relatively new area of international inquiry Cover Fear of Crime Dan A. Lewis, Greta W. Salem, This book argues that fear of crime is not always triggered by direct experience with or knowledge about criminal events Fear can also be elicited by what can be termed incivility those features in a community that reflect the erosion of commonly accepted standards and values Fear becomes a social problem when collective action is difficult and social change is rapid and devastating In those communities where citizens develop the capacity to regulate behaviour in conformance with conventional standards fear will be held in check The book describes the results of a major research initiative undertaken by the Reactions to Crime Project 1975-80 and conducted at Northwestern University In it the authors trace the development of fear of crime as a social problem in the United States and the dominance of the victimization perspective in its analysis outline the major components of the social control perspective and apply that perspective in the analysis of project data collected in ten neighborhoods in Chicago Philadelphia and San Francisco The final two chapters discuss the policy implications of the study

Inventing Fear of Crime Murray Lee, 2013-06-17 The notion of the fear of crime has become as important as crime itself This book analyses the emergence of the fear of crime as a meaningful concept in both social enquiry and governmental and political discourse particularly in the UK Australia and New Zealand and North America

Fear of Crime in the United States Jodi Lane, Nicole E. Rader, Billy Henson, Bonnie Fisher, David C. May, 2014 Fear of Crime in the United States Causes Consequences and Contradictions examines the nature and extent of crime related fear The authors describe and evaluate key research findings in the specific areas of methodology gender age race and ethnicity and socioeconomic status contextual predictors and the consequences of fear of crime They discuss the improvement of fear of crime measures over time the consistent finding that women are more afraid of crime the impact of age race and ethnicity and socioeconomic status on fear and the importance of environmental factors such as witnessing crime and perceptions of diversity disorder and decline and indirect victimization through acquaintances and the media on fear The book also describes the physical psychological behavioral and social effects of fear of crime In the end the authors tie the findings together to suggest important policy and research implications from the wealth of available research There is no other book of which I am aware that so masterfully reviews empirical studies on fear of crime during the past half century to show how the research has changed and will continue to evolve As long as there is crime there will be perceptions of risk and fear of victimization and Lane et al help one to sift through the research with conceptual precision to formulate the most scientifically valid conclusions about the phenomena The book is a hedgehog view of the research but points the way to needed research on topics such as fear of terrorism and how social context shapes perceptions of crime The book is must reading for those involved in research on victimization or fear of crime

Kenneth F Ferraro Distinguished Professor of Sociology and Director of the Center on Aging and the Life Course Purdue University This book consolidates the literature on fear of crime in a way that is unprecedented and that lends much needed coherence to the area It is The Fear of Crime Jason Ditton, Stephen Farrall, 2017-07-05 Studies of the fear of crime have constituted what is undeniably the fastest growing research area within criminology in the last decade and this shows no sign of diminishing The editors have a distinguished record of innovative research in the field being responsible for a number of seminal empirical and theoretical articles In this volume they have collected together and for the first time all the most significant contributions to the field The collection includes an introductory essay by the editors and articles reflecting an overview of the field the causes of vulnerability the sources of information on victimisation the methods used to survey fear the theoretical models employed to explain it and the nature of policies designed to reduce fear Fear of Crime Dan A. Lewis, 2017 Most studies of fear of crime assume that is primarily induced by direct or indirect contact with a criminal event Consequently programs designed to deal with this problem focus on either increased police protection or a number of crime prevention programs In this study Dan A Lewis and Greta W Salem raise questions both about the validity of these assumptions and the effectiveness of the programs A five year investigation has led the authors to challenge those theories that focus only on the psychological responses to victimizations and fail to take into account the social and political environments within which such fears are shaped and nurtured Explicitly laying out a social control perspective which informs their research and analysis the authors examine the fear of crime in ten neighborhoods in Chicago San Francisco and Philadelphia which represent the range of communities typically found in urban areas On the basis of their analysis the authors contend that fear of crime is not related to exposure or knowledge about criminal events alone but also stems from residents concerns about broad changes taking place in their neighborhoods Many people they argue are afraid not only because crime occurs but also because they believe that they have lost control over the environment in which they live Lewis and Salem conclude that the eradication of fear of crime requires strategies that move beyond the traditional crime prevention programs to consider ways to restore the control that community residents feel they have lost and the possibilities for a more equitable distribution of security in urban areas Provided by publisher The Routledge International Handbook on Fear of Crime Murray Lee, Gabe Mythen, 2017-12-01 The Routledge International Handbook on Fear of Crime brings together original and international state of the art contributions of theoretical empirical policy related scholarship on the intersection of perceptions of crime victimisation vulnerability and risk This is timely as fear of crime has now been a focus of scholarly and policy interest for some fifty years and shows little sign of abating Research on fear of crime is demonstrative of the inter disciplinary nature of criminology drawing in the disciplines of sociology psychology political science history cultural studies gender studies planning and architecture philosophy and human geography This collection draws in many of these interdisciplinary themes This collection also extends the boundaries of fear of crime research It does this both methodologically and conceptually but perhaps more importantly it moves us beyond some of the often repeated debates in this field to focus on novel topics from unique perspectives The book begins by plotting the history of fear of crime s development then moves on to investigate the methodological and theoretical debates that have ensued and the policy transfer that occurred across jurisdictions Key elements in debates and research on fear of crime concerning gender race and ethnicity are covered as are contemporary themes in fear of crime research such as regulation security risk and the fear of terrorism the mapping of fear of crime and fear of crime beyond urban landscapes The final sections of the book explore geographies of fear and future and unique directions for this research

Fear of Crime and Criminal Victimization Wolfgang Bilsky,Christian Pfeiffer,Peter Wetzels,1993

Psychology of Fear, Crime and the Media Derek Chadee,2015-12-07 The media continue to have a significant persuasive influence on the public perception of crime even when the information presented is not reflective of the crime rate or actual crime itself There have been numerous theoretical studies on fear of crime in the media but few have considered this from a social psychological perspective As new media outlets emerge and public dependence on them increases the need for such awareness has never been greater This volume lays the foundation for understanding fear of crime from a social psychological perspective in a way that has not yet been systematically presented to the academic world This volume brings together an international team of experts and scholars to assess the role of fear and the media in everyday life Chapters take a multidisciplinary approach to psychology sociology and criminology and explore such topics as dual process theory construal level theory public fascination with gangs and other contemporary issues
