Important OSHA Standards Contributing to Fewer Workplace Accidents

Standard 1910.132: Personal Protective Equipment: Protective equipment, including clothing, helmets, goggles and other eye protection, must be used when process or environment presents hazards. Electrical safety equipment or mechanical failures can cause deadly harm.

Standard 1910.147: Lock Out-Tag Out: Before any service or maintenance work is performed, the energy source must be isolated and locked out. The release of hazardous energy during the servicing process can cause injury or death. OSHA estimates that 50,000 workers each year are injured by OSHA.

Standard 1910.119: Process Safety Management (PSM): Put in place in 1992 to prevent a major unplanned release of a highly reactive, toxic, or flammable chemical. OSHA estimates that 100,000 workers are injured each year by PSM. That number is expected to rise to 150,000 by 2020.

OSHA Inspections: OSHA inspectors conduct workplace safety inspections. They check for violations of OSHA standards. They issue citations and penalties. They also provide training and technical assistance to employers.
