Enhancing Value in Design Decisions Stephen J. Kirk, 1993      Life Cycle Costing for Facilities Alphonse Dell'Isola, Stephen J. Kirk, 2003-05-30 Facility designers and owners are frustrated with cost cutting efforts that yield the cheapest product but sacrifice quality Life cycle costing properly done enables them to achieve both high quality and costs that meet their budgets The authors widely recognized leaders in these techniques show how LCC can work for a broad variety of projects from several types of buildings to roads and bridges to HVAC and electrical upgrades to materials and equipment procurement LCC can be applied to every aspect of construction from all types of buildings commercial educational industrial health care and more to roads and bridges to HVAC equipment and electrical systems upgrades and materials and equipment procurement A life cycle costs section a major part of the book provides maintenance and replacement costs for all elements of the facility from the foundation and structure to the walls and floors plumbing HVAC and electrical systems and landscaping The electronic life cycle costing spreadsheet program included with the book simplifies the process of applying LCC to users own projects FEATURES There are also sixteen Case Studies that show how to apply LCC to particular facility types and building components including Health care and nursing facilities College campus and high schools Office buildings courthouses and banks Chemical plants and museum renovations Regional highway systems Exterior walls elevators lighting HVAC and more The book s extensive cost section provides maintenance and replacement costs for facility elements from foundation and structure to walls and floors plumbing HVAC and electrical and landscaping These proven methods are equally effective in new construction remodeling renovations and restorations

Understanding Game-based Approaches for Improving Sustainable Water Governance Wietske Medema, Chengzi Chew, Jan Franklin Adamowski, Igor Mayer, Arjen Wals, 2020-04-28 The sustainable governance of water resources relies on processes of multi stakeholder collaborations and interactions that facilitate knowledge co creation and social learning Governance systems are often fragmented forming a barrier to adequately addressing the myriad of challenges affecting water resources including climate change increased urbanized populations and pollution Transitions towards sustainable water governance will likely require innovative learning partnerships between public private and civil society stakeholders It is essential that such partnerships involve vertical and horizontal communication of ideas and knowledge and an enabling and democratic environment characterized by informal and open discourse There is increasing interest in learning based transitions Thus far much scholarly thinking and to a lesser degree empirical research has gone into understanding the potential impact of social learning on multi stakeholder settings The question of whether such learning can be supported by forms of serious gaming has hardly been asked This Special Issue critically explores the potential of serious games to support multi stakeholder social learning and collaborations in the context of water governance Serious games may involve simulations of real world events and processes and are challenge players to solve contemporary societal problems they therefore have a purpose beyond entertainment They offer a largely untapped potential to support social learning and collaboration by facilitating access to and the exchange of knowledge and information enhancing stakeholder interactions empowering a wider audience to participate in decision making and providing opportunities to test and analyze the outcomes of policies and management solutions Little is known about how game based approaches can be used in the context of collaborative water governance to maximize their potential for social learning While several studies have reported examples of serious games there is comparably less research about how to assess the impacts of serious games on social learning and transformative change

Sustainable Global Health Systems and Pharmaceutical Development Bhavishya Mittal,2024-09-02 Strategic decision making focusing on economics is the fundamental requirement to generate efficiency and improve productivity in any manufacturing environment In the 21st century the science of drug development is an established field that requires a dedicated and synergistic partnership between various subject matter experts Unfortunately pharmaceutical research is complicated time consuming attritive and costly with development costs ranging from 4 billion to 11 billion per commercialized drug There are more than 750 biotech and big pharma companies in the US that are developing new drug products for a vast number of therapeutic indications Due to the high attrition rate in clinical trials a small percentage of these drugs get commercialized Still a very high amount of resources are being spent on drug development from a societal perspective Despite being an economically intense activity the current state of drug product development makes a limited effort to integrate economics into product design and development For example pharmaceutical scientists are excellent at a data driven decision making process that requires technical elements and a few strategic elements However there is minimal integration of financial valuation elements commonly employed in other high tech industries such as fine chemicals automotive aerospace etc into pharmaceutical drug development Unfortunately this hurts the sustainability of the health system of which these products will be a part in the future A desirable future state integrates fundamentals of economics in product design and development so that the decision making is parameterized the cost of goods can be lowered wastage can be reduced patient centricity is built into the design and manufacturing distribution efficiencies can be gained The financial benefits of such an approach could allow for these savings to be passed on to the stakeholders and improve the value proposition of pharmaceuticals which is critical to maintaining the innovation potential This book hopes to introduce the reader to this desired future state of pharmaceutical drug development Software Engineering Richard W.
