Excerpt from Gregg Speed Studies The intensification of the course of study in shorthand departments of both public and private schools has resulted in a happy welding of theory with speed practice This has meant a scrapping of the old methods of instruction which were based upon the idea of a distinct separation of the theory work from the advanced Speed studies is intended to give practical effect to this modern tendency It is an effort to put into teachable form the principles outlined by me in two addresses which were delivered before educational associations on The Application of Modern Efficiency Principles to the Teaching of Shorthand While it breaks new ground so far as shorthand textbooks and practice books are concerned everything contained in it has been proved by the acid test of my own classroom experience In planning the studies preceding each section of the book the method adopted by the great industries in developing efficiency has been followed Just as the best method of performing any mechanical operation is first established in a factory by scientific test and each new workman is required to conform to that method so in this plan of teaching advanced shorthand we endeavor from the first to teach the student the best possible way of writing shorthand He is taught the correct posture for writing the correct manner of holding his pen the correct manner of turning the pages the quickest and easiest way to make the various combinations the importance of compactness in writing to make rapid transitions between the forms and to eliminate what Herbert Spencer called unregistered movements of the pen An examination of the book will I believe disclose many notable contributions to the pedagogy of shorthand but the two outstanding features are First the presentation of practice material in its shorthand form instead of in print as is done in most dictation books Second the development of a large and varied writing vocabulary through the unique plan of incorporating vocabulary drills with the work in dictation The first of these features can hardly be overemphasized Much observation in teaching shorthand has convinced me that the best results are obtained through the reading of shorthand The reasons may be summarized briefly 1 The student is more interested in reading shorthand than in reading print and interest in a subject is of the first importance in securing results 2 As he may be called upon to read the shorthand notes at any point in the assignment he will naturally give more time to preparing himself to read fluently About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that
