Ethical Issues In Suicide:

Ethical Issues in Suicide M. Pabst Battin,1995 This book provides a broad systematic and comprehensive exploration of both historical and contemporary argumentation concerning suicide It probes the underlying ethical religious and philosophical issues about self caused death and shows how they are crucial in the current debate The Death Debate M. Pabst Battin,1996 Practical Ethics in Suicide Brian L. Mishara,David N. Weisstub,2024-02-22 A comprehensive ethical analysis of key issues in suicide prevention research and policies to inform critical decision making The Death Debate Margaret Pabst Battin,M. Pabst Battin,1996 The Death Debate focuses on the central philosophical question What role may the individual play in his or her own death Battin considers the arguments for and against suicide throughout history while offering a culturally diverse perspective She takes both a short range and a long range view of the issues including a chapter length treatment of physician assisted suicide Legal and Ethical Issues Susan Westrick Killion,Katherine Dempski,2000 Authored by two nurse attorneys Legal and Ethical Issues examines topics from basic legal foundations to complicated legal issues challenging nurses everyday As part of the Quick Look Nursing series this book provides legal and ethical information from the nursing core curriculum in a unique format that sets it apart from anything else available to nursing students This book should be helpful as a course supplement as an aid in preparation for course examinations and as a tool to prepare for the NCLEX Ethical Issues in Neurology James L. Bernat,2008 Written by an eminent authority from the American Academy of Neurology s Committee on Ethics Law and Humanities this book is an excellent text for all clinicians interested in ethical decision making The book features outstanding presentations on dying and palliative care physician assisted suicide and voluntary active euthanasia medical futility and the relationship between ethics and the law New chapters in this edition discuss how clinicians resolve ethical dilemmas in practice and explore ethical issues in neuroscience research Other highlights include updated material on palliative sedation advance directives ICU withdrawal of life sustaining therapy gene therapy the very low birth weight premature infant the developmentally disabled patient informed consent organizational ethics brain death controversies and fMRI and PET studies relating to persistent vegetative state The Ethics of Suicide Victor Cosculluela,2020-07-20 Originally published in 1995 this volume addresses a topical subject assisted suicide The book discusses the issues surrounding the morality of suicide and in so doing clarifies the literature in applied ethics It critiques the complex moral and religious arguments on the topic offered by philosophers and theologians It establishes a middle position between those who hold that suicide is never morally permissible and those who claim it always is and it determines when second parties ought to aid and when they ought to prevent suicides Suicide and Ethics Victoria Heather Saigle,2016 The occurrence of suicide and nonfatal suicidal behaviours is a complex health and social problem that causes significant injury and death each year Unfortunately suicide does not receive attention in academic scholarship that is proportional to its overall incidence rate and social impact Ethical concerns and attitudes towards suicide including the involvement of suicidal individuals in decision making are distinct from concerns about related acts such as euthanasia or physician assisted dying. However, they have not been thoroughly explored. Due to this neglect, we believe that we are missing vital knowledge about the dilemmas faced by this population and by professionals who frequently interact with individuals holding suicidal ideations. These gaps may serve as a barrier to knowing how to handle instances of suicidal ideation appropriately. In order for progress to be made, it is vital that we identify these problem areas and work collaboratively to bridge this knowledge gap. We conducted two scoping reviews of literature on the ethics of suicide in order to uncover the most common ethical dilemmas that were presented and to identify issues that have not yet been addressed. These reviews examined 1 ethical issue that arises in suicide research and 2 ethical dilemmas that healthcare professionals encounter when caring for suicidal patients. In total, we found 98 articles that discussed practical ethical issues in these two settings. We identified a range of ethical dilemmas encountered in clinical and research settings. These included institutional barriers, professionals' uncertainty about the most appropriate way to approach suicidal patients, professionals' perceived lack of training, and various issues linked to researchers and healthcare professionals' fear of being held legally accountable for a patient's death. While many of these discussions touched on issues that were not unique to suicide, they were united by a sense that many ethical issues arise from healthcare professionals, researchers, and research ethics boards' sense of duty to prevent suicide. This sense of duty prompted these groups to question whether the normal course of conduct was appropriate for suicidal populations. Whether or not healthcare professionals and researchers are responsible for preventing suicide is a matter of debate. However, what is needed is reflection about what, if anything, makes suicidality different from other ailments and whether these differences justify extraordinary treatment measures. In order to help remove ethical issues caused by suicide, more work will be needed to determine how guidelines could resolve or exacerbate existing problems, determine what steps could ensure the well-being of suicidal individuals in research and clinical practices, and finally, what information should be communicated to researchers and healthcare professionals who intend to work with suicidal populations.
