Increasing employment rates for ethnic minorities Great Britain: National Audit Office, 2008-02 There is a significant gap between the employment rates of the ethnic minority and general populations currently 14.2 percentage points This gap costs the economy some 8.6 billion annually During the last ten years there has been a slow but steady reduction of 2.8 percentage points in the gap The Department for Work and Pensions the Department is responsible for helping people into employment largely through a range of services provided by Jobcentre Plus offices across the country It has a Public Service Agreement target to reduce significantly the ethnic minority employment gap over the three years to spring 2008 The Department is on course to meet this target There have been a number of projects and programmes specifically targeted at ethnic minorities ethnic minority outreach ethnic minority flexible fund specialist employment advisers fair cities partners outreach for ethnic minorities as well as those aimed at the wider disadvantaged community including the deprived areas fund and the city strategy The NAO has not assessed the strategy in purely value for money terms as there are wider benefits and social justice associated with success in this area The Department has made progress but the NAO believes greater continuity would have achieved more A recent move away from a direct focus on ethnic minorities towards wider disadvantaged groups carries the risk that ethnic minorities will not get the help that they need to gain employment

Ethnic and Racial Minorities in Asia Michelle Ann Miller, 2014-02-25 Ethnic and Racial Minorities in Asia explores the relationship between ethnic minority rights and citizenship in Asia. Occupying a prominent place on the global map of conflict, Asia is one of the most ethnically diverse and racially divided regions in the world. It is also the scene of some of the most contrasting state responses to ethnic and racial conflicts ranging from violent military repression and coercion on the one hand to offers of autonomy and other forms of self rule aimed at granting minorities more equal and inclusive citizenship on the other. This volume combines conceptual debates about citizenship with case studies of ethnic minorities from across the Asian region with a particular emphasis on Southeast Asia. The contributing authors question the nature of citizenship in the broader sense of identity, belonging and the rights and responsibilities of ethnic minorities in relation to sovereign nation states. They examine a wide range of key issues including minority rights, claims, ethnic and racial conflict, citizenship, constructions and representations of identity, post colonialism and human security. This book was originally published as a special issue of Ethnic and Racial Studies.

Ethnic Minorities in Nineteenth and Twentieth Century Germany Panikos Panayi, 2000. This is the first book to trace the history of all ethnic minorities in Germany during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Ethnic Minorities in Nineteenth and Twentieth Century Germany argues that all of the different types of states in Germany since 1800 have displayed some level of hostility towards ethnic minorities. While this reached its peak under the Nazis, the book suggests a continuity of intolerance towards ethnic minorities from 1800 that continued into the Federal Republic. During this long period, German states were home to three different types of ethnic minorities in the form of dispersed Jews and Gypsies, localized minorities such as Serbs, Poles and Danes, and immigrants from the 1880s. Taking a chronological approach that runs into the new Millennium, Panikos Panayi traces the history of all of these ethnic groups.
