Financial Accounting With Powerweb:

Financial Accounting Paul E. Solomon, Solomon Paul, 2003 Financial Accounting A New Perspective embodies an approach to teaching that has been developed by author Paul Solomon for over 30 years. The perspective is student centered in that it motivates students by truly acknowledging them as business majors first by taking them out of the preparer mode yet still emphasizing how they cannot be successful in business without accounting. Solomon begins not by talking about business and accounting in the abstract but by introducing a realistic concrete business case that students can count on throughout the book as a controlled environment in which to learn new concepts. Solomon's text presents principles of financial accounting through a framework using the entrepreneurial running case Cards and Memorabilia Unlimited which is fully integrated throughout the text. This case engages the student while exposing them to the use of financial accounting statements and information in developing a new business and their role in business decision making. Early on in the book corporate financial statements are introduced along side those of CMU. Solomon covers debits and credits but delays their presentation until chapter 9 which may well prove to be preferable to skipping them altogether. Students are more prepared to cover debits and credits later in the course and professors are able to at least introduce these important concepts to their business and accounting majors.

Robert Libby, Patricia A. Libby, Daniel G. Short, 2003 Libby Libby Short wrote this text based on their belief that the subject of financial accounting is inherently interesting but financial textbooks are often not. They believe most financial accounting textbooks fail to demonstrate that accounting is an exciting field of study and one that is important to future careers in business. When writing this text they considered career relevance as their guide when selecting material and the need to engage the student as their guide to style pedagogy and design. Libby Libby Short is the only financial accounting text to successfully implement a real world single focus company approach in every chapter. Students and instructors have responded very favorably to the use of focus companies and the real world financial statements. The companies chosen are interesting and the decision making focus shows the relevance of financial accounting regardless of whether or not the student has chosen to major in accounting. This text has enjoyed tremendous success and will continue to do so because of its timely real world and relevant content, its solid pedagogical features, and its appropriate balance of innovative and traditional content.
