Retinoblastoma Gene

rare events

People with a hereditary susceptibility to cancer inherit a damaged gene on one chromosome, as their first "hit," or mutation, occurs at conception. Other people may receive the first hit at a later stage, before or after birth.

Hereditary

In either case, if a cell receives damage to the same gene on the second chromosome, that cell can produce a cancer.

In the childhood eye cancer retinoblastoma, people who inherit the first hit are 100,000 times more likely to develop a second, cancer-causing mutation.
