Globalizing Tobacco Control:

Globalizing Tobacco Control Roddey Reid, 2005-12-20 Reid develops an approach to globalization and health that goes beyond simplistic dichotomies such as the puritanism of the United States in contrast with the more libertine cultures of other countries and he also eschews the equally simplistic view that the world is becoming homogenized David J Hess Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute A tangible aspect of living working and traveling in the 21st century is the experience of moving between smoke filled and smoke free environments In Globalizing Tobacco Control Roddey Reid examines what lies behind this experience the revolution in public attitudes and health codes that regulate daily routines and the life of the body While the gradual replacement of smoking with non smoking as the social norm is a global phenomenon it has not followed the same trajectory everywhere Reid compares anti smoking campaigns in the United States France and Japan for what they reveal about the nature of globalization and liberal arts of government He explores distinctive national histories of tobacco evolving global marketing strategies of transnational tobacco corporations social marketing techniques used to tailor public health messages to particular ethnic communities and the programs of international public health organizations The Global War on Tobacco Heather Wipfli, 2015-07-23 A major contribution not just to tobacco control research but also to research on global governance and public health thorough and compelling Frank J Chaloupka IV Institute for Health Research and Policy University of Illinois Chicago As the era of globalization progressed the tobacco industry capitalized on its elements including trade liberalization foreign direct investment and global communications to expand into countries where effective tobacco control programs were not in place As a consequence tobacco became the leading cause of preventable death in the world killing more people each year than HIV malaria and tuberculosis combined In the mid 1990s a committed group of public health professionals and institutions sought to challenge the tobacco industry's expansion by negotiating a binding international law under the auspices of the World Health Organization The WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control FCTC the first collective global response to the causation of avoidable chronic disease was one of the most quickly ratified treaties in United Nations history In The Global War on Tobacco Heather Wipfli tells the engaging story of the FCTC from its start as an unlikely civil society proposal to its enactment in 178 countries as of June 2014 Wipfli also reveals how globalization offers anti tobacco advocates significant cooperative opportunities to share knowledge and address cross border public health problems The book the first to delve deeply into the origin and development of the FCTC seeks to advance understanding of how non state actors transnational networks and international institutionalization can impact global governance for health Case studies from a variety of diverse high middle and low income countries provide real world examples of the success or failure of tobacco control Written with public health professionals and students in mind The Global War on Tobacco is a fascinating look at how international relations is changing to respond to the modern global marketplace and protect human health Global Tobacco Control P. Cairney, D. Studlar, H.

Mamudu,2011-12-02 The first major book by political scientists explaining global tobacco control policy It identifies a history of minimal tobacco control then charts the extent to which governments have regulated tobacco in the modern era It identifies major policy change from the post war period and uses theories of public policy to help explain the change

Beyond Ratification Thomas J. Bollyky,2010 Tobacco Control in Developing Countries Prabhat Jha, Frank J. Chaloupka,2000 There is no doubt that smoking is damaging global health on an unprecedented scale However there is continuing debate on the economics of tobacco control including the costs and consequences of tobacco control policies This book aims to fill the analytic gap around this debate This book brings together a set of critical reviews of the current status of knowledge on tobacco control While the focus is on the needs of low income and middle income countries the analyses are relevant globally The book examines tobacco use and its consequences including new analyses of welfare issues in tobacco consumption poverty and tobacco and the rationale for government involvement It provides an evidence based review of policies to reduce demand including taxation information and regulation It critically reviews supply side issues such as trade and industry and farming issues including new analyses on smuggling It also discusses the impact of tobacco control programs on economies including issues such as employment tax revenue and welfare losses It provides new evidence on the effectiveness and cost effectiveness of control interventions Finally it outlines broad areas for national and international action including future research directions A statistical annex will contain information on where the reader can find data on tobacco consumption prices trade employment and other items The book is directed at academic economists and epidemiologists as well as technical staff within governments and international agencies Students of economics epidemiology and public policy will find this an excellent comprehensive introduction to economics of tobacco control Globalization and Health Ichiro Kawachi, Sarah Wamala,2006-09-21 Globalization is breaking down economic political cultural demographic and social barriers across the world at an astonishing pace The topic of globalization can arouse passionate debate in many circles including academic journals the popular media and even on the streets This new world order is marked by new actors new rules of governance new forms of communication and the global movement of populations Health is an exquisitely sensitive mirror of social conditions and the authors of this book argue that the assessment of health is an important criterion for evaluating and monitoring the progress of globalization This book provides an analysis of the most serious global threats to health the tools that can be used to evaluate them and the international agencies established to respond to them Medical threats such as infectious diseases obesity tobacco use and global climate change are discussed but the authors also expand their scope to include socio political health impacts such as economic inequality The complex role of organizations such as the World Health Organization the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank is also analyzed as is the increasing interconnectedness of health and non health actors Is this blurring of boundaries really beneficial to the public s health or have these actors abandoned health issues for power politics By drawing together an international group of health experts

Governing Global Health Katherine Elizabeth Kenny, 2015 This dissertation examines the coproduction of epistemic and regulatory authority in the field of global health using the case of international tobacco control In 2005 the world's first public health treaty the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control FCTC was brought into force by the World Health Organization WHO Unanimously adopted by the World Health Assembly in 2003 the FCTC has since become one of the most widely and rapidly adopted treaties in the history of the United Nations The success of the treaty is frequently attributed to its unequivocal evidence base and as a result the FCTC is frequently seen primarily as a technical accomplishment However the evidence base of global tobacco control has been built on a very particular economic valuing of human life that emerged with the introduction of the Disability Adjusted Life Year DALY metric by the World Bank in 1993 The development of the DALY metric coupled with organizational reconfigurations in the field of world health instantiated cost effectiveness as a dominant logic and enabled tobacco control to rise to prominence on the WHO's agenda At the same time the international movement for tobacco control began to gain traction as new political and discursive opportunity structures arose amidst WHO reform during the last 1990s The dissertation argues that the accomplishment of the FCTC is much more than an evidence based technical accomplishment it represents the institutionalization of a new way of quantifying disease economizing life and governing health on a global scale and a key moment in the transition from a post war configuration of international health to the contemporary neoliberal global health order Drawing on a range of textual sources participant observations and interviews with key actors the dissertation attends to the economization of life by tracing the epistemological social and political dimensions of the development of the FCTC treaty Its findings contribute to interdisciplinary scholarship on the history of world health critical studies of global health and social studies of the relationship between science and policy or between knowledge and power including science and technology studies biopolitics and social studies of globalization and postcolonialism
