Raised Up Down Yonder Angela McMillan Howell, 2013-11-01 Raised Up Down Yonder attempts to shift focus away from why black youth are problematic to explore what their daily lives actually entail Howell travels to the small community of Hamilton Alabama to investigate what it is like for a young black person to grow up in the contemporary rural South What she finds is that the young people of Hamilton are neither idly passing their time in a stereotypically languid setting nor are they being corrupted by hip hop culture and the perils of the urban North as many pundits suggest Rather they are dynamic and diverse young people making their way through the structures that define the twenty first century South Told through the poignant stories of several high school students Raised Up Down Yonder reveals a group that is often rendered invisible in society Blended families football sagas crunk music expanding social networks and a nearby segregated prom are just a few of the fascinating juxtapositions

Growing Up Black In America Lisa Noel, 2021-11-26 Growing Up Black in America are the stories of a Black American female with Sickle Cell Disease and her personal experiences with the systemic racism and prejudice I have witnessed and received. It starts from the birth of black children and the health care system. The teachers and the school system, the religion we are taught, the police with their harassment and straight up murders, the justice system with their school to prison pipeline and laws written specifically to arrest the black male and separate the black family. The church that funded the kidnapping of African slaves. And the racist parents that continue to teach this cycle of hatred and judgement of others generation after generation. We all have our stories and these are mine. And after hundreds of years we are still left with the same unanswered question: What have we as the black American children of kidnapped African slaves ever do to deserve such hatred? AND THIS IS WHY WE PROTEST
