

8. If you had a super-power, what would it be and why?

I love the flawed character and humanity of Iron Man, but hate heights, so flying is no good for me. I guess I would love the ability to heal from the original first century super-hero (Jesus), especially for mental health.

9. What advice would you give to inspire the next generation of community paediatricians?

With Progress Plus reducing exposure to community paediatrics, I would start by telling general paediatric trainees, come and see what we do. The work we do is really interesting, and rewarding, whether working with children with autism, cerebral palsy, neurodisability or in the care system. All our local medical students do a week in community, and I have offered research projects most years, which our students all have to do. Such opportunities to showcase the work we do are vital. Whilst not everyone will enjoy community paediatrics, if you don't have the opportunity to find out, you will never know.

But that also means when we have trainees, we need to make sure they experience the breadth of work we are involved in, not just use them to keep on top of our (Education and Health Care Plans) EHCP medicals. And to those who are already committed to community paediatrics, that's brilliant, you've made a great career choice, but now get involved in research! It's the best way to find answers to the clinical challenges we face and will hopefully improve how we are perceived by our acute colleagues. We desperately need more research active clinicians, alongside clinical academics. If you are involved in research, you will need to be aware of what others are doing, and hopefully this will help you be evidence-based in your practice, and don't be afraid of asking families to get involved in research-most value the opportunity, especially when offered the opportunity to help run research with you.

And for those looking at consultant posts, I would choose to work in a Child Development Centre that functions as an in-person multi-disciplinary team. Working as a paediatrician in isolation and having to beg, steal or borrow input from (Allied Healthcare Professionals) AHPs sitting in a different trust can be very challenging.

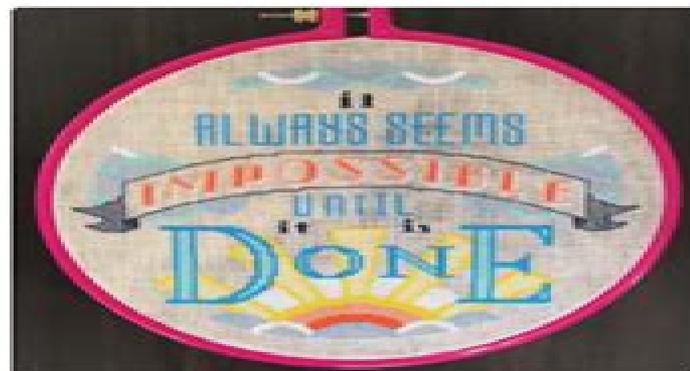

10. Finally, if you were stranded on a desert island, what three luxury items would you take with you?

1. A means of watching test match cricket and Liverpool football games live. Hopefully this might also include access to Disney Plus so I can watch the latest Marvel and Star War films or series.
2. A regular supply of milk chocolate though might need a way to avoid it melting too. Actually, this should be an essential (as a food item) so I would also bring my Guitar.
3. A Garmin wristwatch so I can monitor all the exercise I will be doing running laps of the island and to improve my hill running score on the volcano slopes in the middle of the island, and maybe even use map function to find a way home! And my kids can follow me and find out where I am on Strava! As they tell me, if it's not on Strava, you didn't do it. I would of course run a weekly park run around the island and aim to beat my 26-minute PB for 5K.

Oh, and in the tradition of desert island discs, my one book would be Lord of the Rings, and my music tracks include Bridge Over Troubled Water (Simon and Garfunkel), Don't Fear the Reaper (Blue Oyster Cult), and Smoke on the Water (Deep Purple).

This is the second article in the series about hobbies and wellbeing following Dr Hallam's inspiring article about fell running in the last RACCH News. My main issue when asked to write about one of my hobbies was trying to focus on only one, as I have far too many hobbies! Therefore, this article is focused on a long-standing hobby of mine: cross stitch.

My mum taught me to cross stitch when I was young child. It was definitely not a cool thing for a kid to do in the 90s, so I secretly cross stitched behind closed doors at home throughout my teenage years. I cannot remember a time when I have not had a 'work in progress' (WIP) waiting to be completed. It is a perfect excuse to stay inside during the cold winter months and enjoying resting on the sofa guilt-free as you produce something beautiful.

Cross stitch is a form of counted embroidery involving making X-shaped stitches on loose weave fabric called aida. These X-shaped stitches are used to create pictures by following a grid pattern with symbols outlining what colour thread to use for each square of fabric. These pictures range from Victorian-esque samplers to modern contemporary designs. It is hard to describe the technique in words rather than demonstrating it visually, but it is one of the easiest forms of embroidery to learn. It is a slow repetitive process, so it is excellent way to practice mindfulness. It can take a few hours
