

THE IMPACT OF MODERNITY ON THE FAMILIES

Modernization as a process has meant a transformation and readjustment of traditional patterns of life.

The advancement of industrialization and the consequent urbanization have generated changes in social, value, and cultural order, which have had repercussions in a search for adaptability by societies.

The families tended:

- a) to nuclearization as a mechanism for adjustment to the processes modernizers,
- b) gender relations have tried to position themselves on a more egalitarian, subjects at a psychosocial level, have restructured their ways of ancestral lives.

The modern = modernity

Modernity: ways of life or social organization that emerged in Europe (17th century onwards) and then spread to the rest of the world.

Modernity: a philosophical concept that integrates reason as a principle of the emancipation and freedom that allow individuals to become protagonists of their own history, instead of blindly obeying a set of rules dictated by external authorities.

It has to do with individuation: individual evaluation and choice and with subjectivity, intimacy, taking relationships to a private level.
