From Local To Global Optimization:

From Local to Global Optimization A. Migdalas, Panos M. Pardalos, Peter Värbrand, 2013-03-09 The book consists of research papers based on results presented at a conference held in Sweden to celebrate Hoang Tuy's achievements in Optimization. The collection is dedicated to Professor Tuy on the occasion of his 70th birthday. The papers appear in alphabetical order by first author and cover a wide range of recent results in Mathematical Programming. The work of Hoang Tuy in particular in Global Optimization has provided directions for new algorithmic developments in the field. Audience: Faculty graduate students and researchers in mathematical programming, computer science and engineering.

Satisfiability Problem: Theory and Applications Dingzhu Du, Jun Gu, Panos M. Pardalos, NSF Science and Technology Center in Discrete Mathematics and Theoretical Computer Science, 1997. The satisfiability (SAT) problem is central in mathematical logic, computing theory and many industrial applications. There has been a strong relationship between the theory, the algorithms and the applications of the SAT problem. This book aims to bring together work by the best theorists, algorithmists and practitioners working on the SAT problem and on industrial applications as well as to enhance the interaction between the three research groups. The book features the applications of theoretical algorithmic results to practical problems and presents practical examples for theoretical algorithmic study. Major topics covered in the book include practical and industrial SAT problems and benchmarks, significant case studies and applications of the SAT problem and SAT algorithms, new algorithms and improved techniques for satisfiability testing, specific data structures and implementation details of the SAT algorithms and the theoretical study of the SAT problem and SAT algorithms. Global optimization as a combination of global and local search

Aimo Törn, 1974. Minimax and Applications Ding-Zhu Du, Panos M. Pardalos, 1995-10-31. Techniques and principles of minimax theory play a key role in many areas of research including game theory, optimization and computational complexity. In general, a minimax problem can be formulated as $\min_{x \in X} \max_{y \in Y} f(x, y)$ where $f(x, y)$ is a function defined on the product of X and Y spaces. There are two basic issues regarding minimax problems. The first issue concerns the establishment of sufficient and necessary conditions for equality $\min_{x \in X} \max_{y \in Y} f(x, y) = \max_{y \in Y} \min_{x \in X} f(x, y)$. The classical minimax theorem of von Neumann is a result of this type. Duality theory in linear and convex quadratic programming interprets minimax theory in a different way. The second issue concerns the establishment of sufficient and necessary conditions for values of the variables x and y that achieve the global minimax function value $\min_{x \in X} \max_{y \in Y} f(x, y)$. There are two developments in minimax theory that we would like to mention.

Computation for Design and Optimization Program,2008 This thesis presents a novel algorithm called the parametric optimized belief roadmap POBRM to address the problem of planning a trajectory for controlling a robot with imperfect state information under uncertainty This question is formulated abstractly as a partially observable stochastic shortest path POSSP problem We assume that the feature based map of a region is available to assist the robot s decision making The POBRM is a two phase algorithm that combines local and global optimization In an offline phase we construct a belief graph by probabilistically sampling points around the features that potentially provide the robot with valuable information Each edge of the belief graph stores two transfer functions to predict the cost and the conditional covariance matrix of a final state estimate if the robot follows this edge given an initial mean and covariance In an online phase a sub optimal trajectory is found by the global Dijkstra s search algorithm which ensures the balance between exploration and exploitation Moreover we use the iterative linear quadratic Gaussian algorithm iLQG to find a locally feedback control policy in continuous state and control spaces to traverse the sub optimal trajectory We show that under some suitable technical assumptions the error bound of a sub optimal cost compared to the globally optimal cost can be obtained The POBRM algorithm is not only robust to imperfect state information but also scalable to find a trajectory quickly in high dimensional systems and environments In addition the POBRM algorithm is capable of answering multiple queries efficiently We also demonstrate performance results by 2D simulation of a planar car and 3D simulation of an autonomous helicopter

Frontiers in Global Optimization

Christodoulos A. Floudas, Panos M. Pardalos, 2004 Global Optimization has emerged as one of the most exciting new areas of mathematical programming Global optimization has received a wide attraction from many fields in the past few years due to the success of new algorithms for addressing previously intractable problems from diverse areas such as computational chemistry and biology biomedicine structural optimization computer sciences operations research economics and engineering design and control The chapters in this volume focus on recent deterministic methods and stochastic methods for global optimization distributed computing methods in global optimization and applications of global optimization in several branches of applied science and engineering computer science computational chemistry structural biology and bio informatics

Most books about global optimization describe the theory of the algorithms whereas a given implementation s quality never depends exclusively on the theoretical soundness of the algorithms that are implemented The literature rarely discusses the tuning of algorithmic parameters implementation tricks software architectures and the embedding of local solvers within global solvers And yet there are many good software implementations out there from which the entire community could learn something The scope of this book is moving a few steps toward the systematization of the path that goes from the invention to the implementation and testing of a global optimization algorithm Some of the contributors to the book are famous and some are less well known but all are experts in the discipline of actually getting global optimization to work Thus the papers in this book address the following topics Descriptions of new implementations of general purpose or problem specific global optimization algorithms New algorithms in global optimization some with numerical results and a discussion of the implementation Surveys discussing existing software packages
