Imperial Decision-making and Communication in Early China Enno Giele, 2006 The emerging Chinese empire was faced with a dilemma typical for empires be they Roman Mesopotamian or Carolingian The realm was won on horseback but could not be ruled from horseback as an advisor of the Han dynasty put it Military conquest had to be buttressed by a convincing legitimation of the supreme rule including certain forms of power sharing as well as by the establishment of a courtly protocol and a bureaucracy that provided for both a smooth operation of government and checks and balances Here the communication to and from the imperial court attained a crucial role This study identifies the characteristics of different types of documents imperial edicts as well as memorials petitions etc that helped to shape imperial policies It contrasts a classification of documents by the famous intellectual Cai Yong second century A D with the remnants of courtly communication in the received sources and is able for the first time to make sense of the terse explanations that have long baffled historians of ancient China children of his village were struck with a mysterious illness Number Ten Ox sought a wiseman to save them He found master Li Kao a scholar with a slight flaw in his character Together they set out to find the Great Root of Power the only possible coincidences which were really not coincidences at all And it involved them in an ancient crime that still perturbed the serenity of Heaven Simply and charmingly told this is a wry tale a sly tale and a story of wisdom delightfully askew Once read
