

Drug and Alcohol Abuse Treatment Effectiveness

Topic: Sociology | Words: 578 | Pages: 2

The 2008 Illinois state report for the effectiveness of treatment

The main aim of treating individuals who have undergone substance abuse and addiction is to offer a channel of services that can assist towards their recovery and support system, treatment of addicted persons, early intervention programs, and community intervention (Saddler, 2008). To bolster the effectiveness of the treatment program, the targeted group includes those who are facing addiction problems and substance abuse addicts such as persons who abuse alcohol.

There is a complex interaction in the recovery and treatment support system. Some of the areas that are given key attention include psychotherapy treatments, medical prescriptions, and general rehabilitation procedures. As such, trained professionals such as healthcare experts and peer counselors are used to ensure that the addicted persons receive much-needed help.

The treatment program has been deemed to be generally effective since drug abusers are given keen attention and adequate follow-up processes. The affected individuals are also allowed to actively participate in the process of their rehabilitation. The latter strategy is necessary since the program caters to the diverse Illinois population (Saddler, 2008).
