Frary, 2009-10 From the Preface The purpose of this little book is to provide a clear and detailed discussion of the elements of glass blowing Many laboratories in this country especially in the west are located a long way from any professional glass blower and the time and money spent in shipping broken apparatus several hundred miles to be mended could often be saved if some of the laboratory force could seal on a new stop cock replace a broken tube or make some temporary repairs Many men in physical or chemical laboratories have occasion to modify some piece of apparatus designed perhaps for other uses or to design new apparatus To such also the ability to perform some of the operations herein described may be very valuable No originality is claimed for the methods here described They are those which the author has found most suitable and convenient in his own work and most easily learned by students The aim has been to describe each operation in such detail that a beginner can follow the process without help and with practice attain satisfactory results It is however much easier to perform any of the operations described after seeing some one else perform it correctly since the temperature the exact time to begin blowing the glass and many other little details are very difficult to obtain from a description Whitaker's Books in Print, 1998

Frary,2015-02-24 the same reason the supply of air is usually regulated by varying the rate of operation of the bellows rather than by adjusting the valve of the blast lamp On the other hand it will be found best to always adjust the flow of the gas by means of the cock on the lamp rather than that at the supply pipe The operator must have complete control over the flame and be able to change its size and character at short notice without giving the work a chance to cool and often without ceasing to support it with both hands Glass Blowing on the Glass Lathe, a Manual of Basic Techniques Bethlehem Apparatus Company,1956 Laboratory Manual of Glass-blowing Francis Cowles Frary,1928 Laboratory Manual of Glass-Blowing Francis C.
