

Colour

Colour is often one of the most exciting components of a painting, but what exactly is it? Understanding the basic principles of colour theory helps you analyse how artists exploit and manipulate it to their work. They use colour together with composition, perspective, and light and shade to strengthen the impact of the artwork itself.

Mixing and comparing colours

The spectrum of light makes colour visible. Light from a source of different angles, either pure (and homogeneous) or from a mixture of different colours. The range of wavelengths perceived can be related to the spectrum: the shorter the wavelength, the more violet and the longer the red. Artists use pure tones from secondary colours that stand out more strongly and affect others. Use of colours is fundamental work. The colour in a painting can provide the means of reflecting light.

The colour wheel

From understanding and using the colour wheel, you can understand how to mix and use colours. The colour wheel is a circular diagram that shows the relationships between the primary and secondary colours. It is a tool for understanding the relationships between the primary and secondary colours. The primary colours are red, yellow, and blue. The secondary colours are green, orange, and purple. The tertiary colours are red-orange, yellow-orange, yellow-green, green, blue-green, and blue-violet.
