Sections of the First Steps Reading Developmental Continuum have been reproduced with the permission of First Steps.

First Steps provides a framework for linking assessment with teaching and learning. It was researched and developed over five years by the Education Department of Western Australia.

First Steps cover the four areas of Oral Language, Reading, Writing and Spelling. For each area a developmental continuum has been prepared to identify the phases in a child's development from pre-literacy to independence.

The Developmental Continua

The continua have been developed to provide teachers with a way of looking at what children can actually do and how they can do it, in order to inform planning for further development. It is recognised that language learning is holistic and develops in relation to the context in which it is used. However, given the complexity of each mode of language, a continuum has been provided for reading, writing, spelling and oral language, in order to provide teachers with in-depth information in each one of these areas.

The Continua make explicit some of the indicators, or descriptors of behaviour, that will help teachers identify how children are constructing and communicating meaning through language. The indicators were extracted from research into the development of literacy in English-speaking children. It was found that indicators tend to cluster together, ie if children exhibit one behaviour, they tend to exhibit several other related behaviours. Each cluster of indicators was arbitrarily called a 'phase'. This clustering of indicators into phases allows teachers to map overall progress while demonstrating that children's language does not develop in a linear sequence. The concept of a phase was shown to be valid by the Australian Council for Education research in their initial research into the validity of the Writing: Developmental Continuum.

Individual children may exhibit a range of indicators from various phases at any one time. 'Key' indicators are used to place children within a specific phase, so that links can be made to appropriate learning experiences. Key indicators describe behaviours that are typical of a phase. Developmental records show that children seldom progress in a neat and well-sequenced manner; instead they may remain in one phase for some length of time and move rapidly through other phases. Each child is a unique individual with different life experiences so that no two developmental pathways are the same.

The indicators are not designed to provide evaluative criteria through which every child is expected to progress in sequential order. They reflect a developmental view of teaching and learning and are clearly related to the contexts in which development is taking place. That is, language development is not seen as a 'naturalistic' or universal phenomena through which all children progress in the same way. Children's achievements, however, provide evidence of an overall pattern of development which accommodates a wide range of individual difference.

MyRead is aimed at readers at stages 3, 4 and 5 of the Reading Developmental Continuum (shaded in green). Phases 3, 4 and 5 are described in detail below.
