Engineer Memoirs United States. Army. Corps of Engineers,2002 Engineer Memoirs, Major Richard S. Kem

Richard S. Kem,2002-10 Major General Richard Samuel Sam Kem s distinguished Army career culminated in two prominent senior positions Chief of Staff of the U S Army Europe and Deputy Chief of Engineers For two years at the end of the Cold War he was one of the senior leaders of the Army s most important front line combat force and in his last assignment he helped lead the U S Army Corps of Engineers during a critical transition period in its modern history As General Kem thoughtfully describes in this interview his earlier assignments had well prepared him for his senior positions This oral history interview contains General Kem s recollections and reflections on his background and his career in the U S Army Corps of Engineers Like all oral history interviews the transcript includes General Kem s personal thoughts and perspectives Neither his views nor those of the interviewer necessarily reflect those of the Department of Defense or the Corps of Engineers The strength of oral history is that it captures the unique perspectives and interpretations of individuals who witnessed or participated in historical events Oral history can supplement and enrich the official record but never replace it

Interviews are often not objective nor are they expected to be. Their value is contained in the unique personal perspective they provide. Memoirs of an Engineer Ben Ostrofsky, 2013-12-01 It's one year after the attack on Pearl Harbor and in the middle of WWII Ben convinces his mother to sign papers so he can enlist in the Army Air Corps at the tender age of 17 and so begins a lifetime of intriguing experiences and almost unbelievable stories. Join Ben Ostrofsky as he describes the highlights of becoming an engineer during the golden age of technology and the impact one man can have on his profession. Memoirs of an Engineer is a must read for anyone who is or has known an engineer. Engineer in Gray James Hamilton Tomb, 2005 James Hamilton Tomb devoted almost 12 years of his life to wartime naval service. A steam engineer by profession and a torpedo expert by circumstance Tomb was in the forefront of naval weapons technology of the period. Within days of his commissioning he... Engineer Memoirs William E. Potter, 2005-01-01 William E. Potter's career exemplifies how management and engineering skills learned in the Army Corps of Engineers provide the basis for professional success in both military and civilian life. Indeed Potter's career is not one but several. His military career began as a young cadet at West Point from where he graduated in 1928. After an assignment on the Nicaragua survey team he furthered his education by earning a Bachelor of Science degree in civil engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The first assignment in which he had genuine management responsibilities was in the Pittsburgh Engineer District where he was assigned in 1933. Beginning in the mud and water around Montgomery Dam on the Ohio River then as a project engineer supervising the construction of Tygart Dam in West Virginia he learned first hand how to manage people and material in order to insure the successful completion of a major project. During World War II Potter served in a number of responsible administrative posts. He was battalion Operations Branch G 4 Section. After the war Potter first became Kansas City District Engineer and then the Alaska District Engineer. In 1949 he was assigned to the office of the Chief of Engineers and for the next two years was in overall charge of the Corps civil works activities. In July 1952 Potter became Division Engineer of the Missouri River Division. He was in charge of implementing the Corps military and civil works activities throughout the Missouri basin. One part of his responsibilities involved supervising the construction of several dams on the Missouri as provided for in the Pick Sloan plan, the basic planning document for water resources development in the Missouri River watershed. Perhaps the most memorable period of General Potter's career began in June 1956 when he was appointed Governor of the Panama Canal Zone. For four years Potter oversaw the administration of the Zone as well as the maintenance and operation of the Canal itself. In previous positions he had developed the ability to work well with both politicians and the general public. This ability was put to the test in the Canal Zone. He was governor commander of the 25th Armored Engineer Battalion and Engineer of the Sixth Armored Division. In Europe he served in a number of important positions in Headquarters U S Army including Chief of the Plans and at a time when Panamanians were agitating for increased control of the Canal and Potter found himself front page news in both Panama and the United States. Major General Potter retired from the Army in 1960 At this time he started another career From 1960 to 1965 he was executive vice president of the New York World s Fair working closely with Robert Moses in developing and overseeing fair operations In 1965 he continued his association with enterprises that both educate and entertain when he joined Walt Disney Productions eventually becoming senior vice president of Walt Disney World Company In that capacity he was instrumental in establishing Walt Disney World in Orlando Florida In 1973 Potter retired again although as a private consultant he continued to be actively involved in engineering projects around the world Potter s multi faceted career illustrates in microcosm the way in which the skills of the military and civilian engineer overlap Engineer Memoirs United States.
