3. RESULTS ANALYSIS and DISCUSSION

3.1. Result analysis of SolidWork flow simulation

Flow trajectories results of water in the flow simulation is discussed in this section as well as the response of the turbine flow sensor during the simulation period. The targeted goal of this simulation is primarily to give the global goal velocity and surface goal volume flow rate. As a means of obtaining successive closer approximations for the flow simulation, the simulation process for the two-different velocities of water went through 108 iterations. To show the degree of velocity at the point where the water meets the turbine flow sensor a heat map was used in the simulation. The trajectory length represents the length of the canal. Figure 10(a) showed the flow trajectory animation which implies that the turbine flow sensor obstructed the flow of water in the canal more than the flow trajectory animation in Figure 10(b). Velocity of water set at 1.5m/s showed at Figure 11(a) implies that the increased around the turbine flow sensor was more than the turbine flow sensor's velocity of water set at 5m/s showed at Figure 11(b). These two observations match the theory that turbine flow sensor behave like an actuator and is affected by the speed at which the flow velocity collides with the water particles. A reduction was observed in the flow velocity of Figure 12(a) and Figure 12(b) after the water met the turbine flow sensor.
