Settling Babies into Childcare Settings

Babies can find starting a childcare setting extremely overwhelming. It is important to remember that for babies everything feels different to them and for many it will be the first time they have been separated from their key caregivers. As educators, our role is to settle babies quickly providing warmth and care to ensure positive outcomes for their wellbeing.

If this is achieved, babies will learn that educators know them, will help them and comfort them in the absence of their primary caregiver.

Strategies for Settling Babies

1. Use the key person approach consistently to help babies form a close relationship with one (or two key people) in the setting. These educators will need to be highly responsive to babies' needs, supporting care routines as well as offering comfort and tuning into physical and emotional cues.

2. Communicate regularly and build relationships with the baby's family, offering them reassurance as the baby settles.

3. Use facial expressions, gestures and body language, such as smiling, nodding, giving eye-contact and making similar sounds to those babies are vocalising, this is useful to mirror and empathise with their emotions.

4. Talk to babies and reassure them using a warm and positive tone. Talking, singing, repeating babies' sounds and engaging in back-and-forth interactions will help to soothe babies and develop connection. In addition,
