

EQUILIBRIUM

a balanced system created by opposing forces for any set of reactants and products we get 2 different reactions reactants

product

a forward reaction:

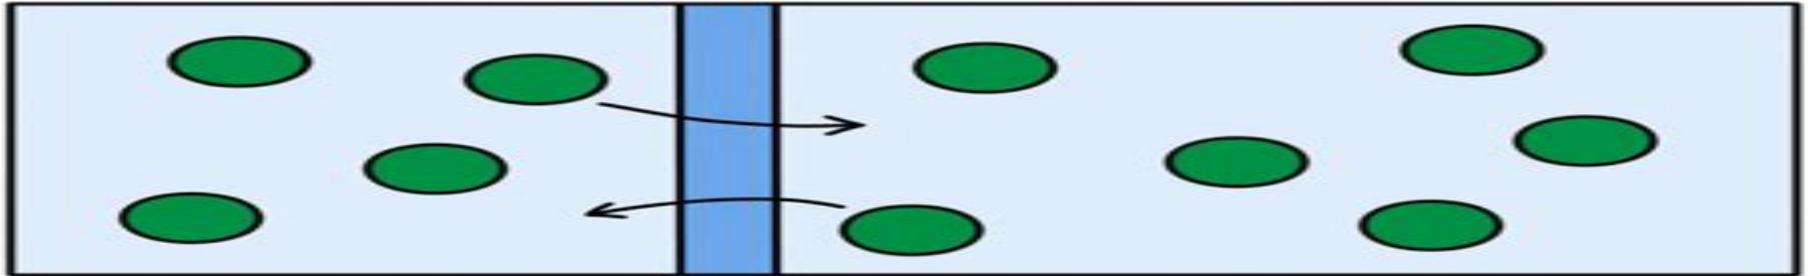

and a reverse reaction:

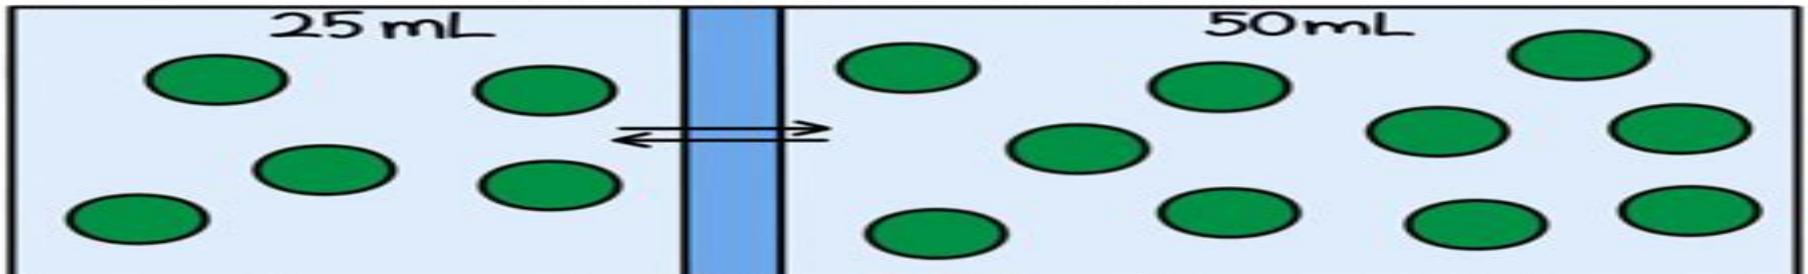

at equilibrium, both reactions are happening at the same rate there is no net change in the amount of reactant or product equilibrium can also be seen in terms of transport across the cell membrane as some molecules move into the cell, others move out at equilibrium, there is an equal concentration of solute inside the cell and outside make sure to factor in the volume because it's the concentration that matters, not the number of molecules
