Scientific Inquiry Cycle: Review

Science helps communities solve problems by developing knowledge and creating things that "solve" with a local focus such as water quality or waste management using science to assess or improve solutions can have a positive impact. Understanding the problem fully, including its causes and effects, is the first step in finding an effective solution.

Designing solutions requires considering various conditions, such as budget, time, and safety concerns. Community members have a part of a solution they face. Challenges, however, are the important to weigh their trade-offs carefully. For example, creating resources for a water filter may affect its cost and ease of use, which influenced the effectiveness of the solution.

After identifying a solution, determining how it works, what conditions affected it, and any compromises that have already been or should involve on the way. Communication, using design models, and reflecting on the results of the solution are important steps. The process of testing, sharing, and evaluating locally encourages responsible decision-making and helps communities thrive.

 - Understanding the problem fully
2. What does determining trade-offs in a solution help with?
- Ignoring the concerns of the community
 - Establishing a consensus that is safe and viable
 - Showing how to avoid trade-offs
 - Determining that the solution has no costs
3. Which is an example of a trade-off?
- Finding a solution with no trade-offs
 - Using expensive materials
 - Using cheap materials
 - Using untested materials
4. Why is a consensus important?
- It allows all team members to agree
 - To make ideas stronger
 - To finish the problem as quickly as possible
 - To avoid discussing trade-offs

6B. Mark if the statement is True (T) or False (F).

1. A solution made after one failed attempt is always better than one that requires multiple attempts.

Answer for each question.

1. How does identifying a solution help in the scientific process?

2. Why must trade-offs be considered in designing a solution?
